SOME of our Democratic contemporaries, in commenting on the young Republican movement in Kentucky, and probably inspired by chagrin that their party should be beaten to the Younger Republican-discussion of live issues, are trying to create discord through suggestions that the new propaganda is factional in its nature, and aimed at certain leaders who have long held eminent position in the party ranks.

From our knowledge of the circumstances that gave birth to the young Republican movement, and our familiarity with the views held by those who are chiefly concerned in its success, we are able to deny emphatically that there is any such disposition or purpose.

From the first the desire has been to develop the progressive spirit that is found existent in the party along the line of harmonious action and friendly co-operation with those now honored as its leaders. Care has been taken not to antagonize anyone whose views are entitled to consideration, and the hope is confidently expressed that the campaign of education and organization will proceed without friction.

The aim is to bring the Republican party in the State into harmony with popular demand, and with the ideals that have gained prevailing strength in its councils throughout the Nation. It is believed that the time is ripe for a readjustment of the party's relation to the people on a definite program of progressive legislation, and in this belief the young Republicans have assurance that many, if not all, the elder leaders in Kentucky concur.

The men who are back of the movement are in earnest, and determined to press forward, but they look for their aroused interest and intelligent activity to be welcomed and approved, rather than resented. They know that the people are with them; that they voice a sentiment which has been growing stronger and better defined as the mass of voters has been educated in questions of the day, and they give credit to the men of the Old Guard for sufficient political perception to realize the importance of the movement.—Louisville Herald.

A SINGULAR fact about New Albany, Ind., is that the city gained just one during the past 10 years. In 1900 the population was 20,628 and in 1910 it was 20,629. Who is the new citizen is what's puzzling that city.

NEBRASKA last year produced corn more valuable than all the gold mined in the United States and Alaska, and worth more than our country's total tobacco crop; and wheat worth more than our total sugar production.

ACCORDING to the last report, the accumulations in the savings banks in the country have increased to four billions. This is doing pretty well at a time when everybody is supposed to be oppressed by the increased cost of living due to the "robber Tariff."

Mrs. Russell, the aged mother of Mr. Charles Russell of West Second street, died Wednesday night at 10:30 o'clock at the home of her daughter at Rural, O. Mrs. Ella Russell and Mrs. J. E. Reed left yesterday to attend the funeral.

Might Have Expected as Much

There was a runaway in Bridge street Wednesday morning about 11 o'clock that could have been avoided by a little forethought on the part of the party in charge. A country man, returning from the East End, where he had delivered his tobacco at the warehouse, heedlessly and thoughtlessly drove his four-horse team under the C. and O. bridge spanning Bridge street during the passage of a freight train. The noise above frightened the team, and, very naturally, the horses equated and started on a dead runaway. At the intersection of Bridge and East Second Street Extension the wagon collided with a telephone pole and came to a sudden halt. Fortunately no one was hurt and the only damage done was to wagon and harness. It was the result of foolishness on the part of our unsensy country friend.
